Graduate Admissions

A person who has earned a baccalaureate degree and is working toward earning university credit hours is considered a graduate student.

The Graduate School receives and processes the applications for graduate admission and any additional supporting documentation. It also coordinates the evaluation of the application by the program or department Graduate Admissions Committee and informs the applicant of the final admission decision.

Applicants should check for other specific program admission requirements listed under the “Graduate Degrees” section of this catalog. Admission to any graduate program is granted by program or department Graduate Admissions Committees or by an established automatic admission decision policy by the program or department Graduate Admissions Committee. The student’s entire record will be considered including the completed application for admission, undergraduate overall GPA, upper level GPA, GPA in the discipline, a student narrative, letters of recommendation, GRE or GMAT scores (evaluated in compliance with HB 1641), interview, and professional and/or academic experience.

Students who are not in good standing in a graduate program and/or wish to apply to a different graduate program, must submit an application for graduate admission to the new program and must be reviewed by the new program or department Graduate Admissions Committees.

Graduate Admission Statuses

Full admission may be granted to students who submit all required documentation and meet program requirements as determined by the Graduate Admissions Committee of the program or department.

Provisional admission may be granted to students who have not submitted all supporting documentation or test scores. The students will be allowed to enroll for up to 6 graduate semester credit hours before being required to submit all pending supporting documentation for review. Provisional admission is not available for all degree programs and is not available for international students. Students should check with the chair of the department/division delivering the program to determine provisional admission availability. Provisional admission does not guarantee full admission after all supporting documentation is received and reviewed. The Graduate Admissions Committee of the program or department will render the final decision.

Probationary admission may be granted to students who have submitted all documents for admission but do not meet all requirements for full admission such as a low overall grade point average, low GRE/GMAT scores, failure to meet program or department requirements, or a lack of an appropriate background for the chosen program. Probationary admission will be changed to full admission upon completion of 12 semester credit hours with a 3.0 or better overall graduate grade point average and once the student has met any additional requirements imposed by the department.

Deferment of admission may be requested by students wishing to defer their offer of admission to a future term. They may make such requests by utilizing the Change of Entry Form available from the Graduate School. Deferrals will only be granted for a term of up to one year from the offer of admissions and the degree that is being sought remains the same. Students who defer their admission for more than one year will have to reapply.

The College of Arts and Sciences (COAS) reviews applicants prior to the beginning of each long semester. Master program applicants for the MA in Counseling Psychology must submit satisfactory GRE scores to be admitted. Language, Literature, and Translation majors are required to take a departmentally administered examination. The Biology and Counseling Psychology programs do not offer provisional admission.

The A. R. Sanchez, Jr. School of Business (ARSSB) Graduate Admissions Committee will make admission recommendations based upon review of the applicant’s upper level grade point average, standardized test scores (e.g., GMAT/GRE/EXAMEN DE ADMISION), statement of purpose, resume, and two letters of recommendation. Students admitted with conditions must satisfactorily complete those conditions in order to remain in graduate school.

The College of Education (COED) reviews applicants for admission to its graduate programs prior to the beginning of each semester. Applicants are reviewed on the basis of their completed application for graduate school, academic record as reflected on transcripts, letters of recommendation, interviews, and other relevant documentation. The College of Education, if looking to grant students an admission status, only grants full admission due to accreditation and state regulations.

The Canseco School of Nursing in the College of Nursing and Health Sciences (CNHS) reviews applicants for the FNP program in March prior to the beginning of graduate coursework in the Summer. Nursing Administration applications are reviewed on a continuous basis. All MSN program applicants must apply directly to the Graduate School.

Special Non-Degree Student Admission Information

A person who is earning university credits which are not applicable to a degree at Texas A&M International University is considered a special non-degree student. It is the policy of this institution to allow any student to enroll in any course for enrichment or other purpose, as long as the prerequisites are met or exceptions to these requirements are approved.

Individuals wishing to take courses for personal growth may register for up to twelve hours as non-degree seeking. These courses may not be applicable to a degree program.

Students classified under this category are not entitled to claim the prerogative of graduating under the provisions of the catalog in force at the time of initial enrollment. Students may, on their own initiative, request at any time to be reclassified as a regular degree-seeking student. An updated application for admission with a written request for reclassification should be submitted to the Graduate School. The student will then become responsible for satisfying the requirements of the catalog in force at the time of the request or any subsequent catalog within the established five-year period of limitation (six-years in the case of some master’s programs). For additional information call the Graduate School at (956) 326-3020.
