

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY WITH A MAJOR IN CRIMINAL JUSTICE (PH.D. CJ)

Overview

CIP:43.0104.00

Program Information

The Doctor of Philosophy in Criminal Justice is a comprehensive, hybrid program designed to guide students through an advanced, supervised course of study in criminology, crime and the criminal justice system. It also educates students on contemporary crime problems and the viability of potential policy and criminal justice agency responses to crime. There is a residency requirement to this program. The hybrid nature of the program requires students to attend classes in person at the TAMU campus during the first semester. Subsequent semesters are completed synchronously online. Students taking less than 9 hours the first semester (part time) will need to return to campus for the remaining in person class the following fall semester.

The program takes one cohort of students each year. The application deadline is April 1. Classes begin in August.

Admission

Admission to the Doctor of Philosophy in Criminal Justice degree program requires prospective students to meet specified standards provided by the Graduate School at TAMU. Students seeking admission to the proposed PhD in Criminal Justice degree program must have completed a master's degree before beginning coursework. International students seeking admission to the program must meet the TAMU Graduate School's requirements governing admission of international students. Applications with only a juris doctorate (J.D.) will be required to complete and pass with at least a "B" a master's level statistics course. The PhD in Criminal Justice degree program faculty will review all applications and determine admissibility to the program. TAMU's proposed PhD in Criminal Justice degree program requires the following materials to be submitted by an applicant to the Graduate School at TAMU:

1. Official Texas A&M International University online doctoral degree application and an application fee of $35.00.
2. A master's degree in criminal justice or a closely related field. Students with a Master's degree in a discipline other than Criminal Justice/Criminology or closely related disciplines will be reviewed and determined on a case by case basis.

recommendation may be submitted from another person qualified to evaluate the applicant's potential for doctoral study.

An applicant will need to address the following questions in his/her personal statement: [1] What are your research interests and discuss some of your research experiences. [2] Which faculty member(s) in the PhD program would you most likely work with? Why? [3] What are your career goals and how do you see our PhD Program helping you to achieve those goals? [4] What personal assets (talent, skills, experiences, etc.) can you bring to our program? Note that only a few students will be admitted each year and applicants are unlikely to be successful if there is no suitable supervisor available within the program.
